Addressing priority adaptation measures in Uganda. As climate change progresses, it is increasingly likely that current cropping systems will no longer be viable in many locations.

Uganda is the largest producer of bananas in sub-Saharan Africa. Photo: P. Kimeli (CCAFS) (view original). Sep 11, 2014.  ... to climate change and variability – its economy and the wellbeing of its people are tightly bound to the climate. With a rapidly growing population (annual 3.2%) that needs to be fed, the impacts of climate change will further exacerbate the problems of food insecurity, poverty and weak social institutions. Early adaptation to climate change can moderate impacts of climate and even secure benefits to families. uptake and adaptation in Uganda. Thus, stakeholders played the role of validating and.  and Nwoya ... that. gender and climate change were treated as. cross-cutting issues that lacked priority.  any information exists on empirical achievement. of planned milestones thus far, against its clearly. stated objectives. Otherwise, when properly.  preparing for the future in Uganda. Contents Acknowledgments 3.  Government and development partners can do more to incorporate issues of climate variability and change into both current and future planning and implementation. Efforts to coordinate community, ... addressing climate change issues are largely lacking across Uganda.  Planned Adaptation Adaptation actions that are result of a deliberate policy decision or action on the part of public agencies.  Transformational Adaptation Adaptation that results in a change in the individual or community's primary structure and function.