Part 1 of Till We Have Faces, which consists of 21 chapters, is written by Orual as a defense of her life. She voices her anger at the gods for taking her beloved Psyche from her and claims that her use of psychological manipulation to force Psyche to look at her sleeping husband, in disobedience to his direct command, was justified because she did it for Psyche's own good. Readers are thus challenged to realize that the characters and events are being described entirely from her perspective and that they look quite different from other perspectives. In the much-shorter Part 2, which consists of four chapters, Orual comes to understand, partly as a result of writing Part 1, the self-deceptions that have plagued her for most of her life.

Till We Have Faces
A Myth Retold

$16.99
Item #: 230-66

Description

Author: C.S. Lewis
Christian Publisher
Binding: pb
Pages: 324

Included in these packages:
- 9th Grade Curriculum
- Classical Literature
- History of the Christian Church
- Literature 230

A masterful retelling of the Cupid and Psyche myth presented with a Christian twist as only C.S. Lewis could do it.

No resources.
No attachments or samples.